DETAILS (About the immersion)

Every person who has ever been around horses knows that they make you feel better.

As horses are herd animals with a highly developed flight instinct, they rely heavily on non-verbal communication cues to respond to their environments. These sensory skills are exactly what make horses so receptive and trainable. Horses sense our feelings through the tensing of our shoulders or the relaxation of our posture. They provide a magnifying mirror for the subconscious responses that we might not be able to pinpoint on our own. However, by interacting with horses we can learn to be aware of our body language.

- Jacqueline offers Equine-Assisted Mindfulness groundwork sessions for everyone, no prior experience with horses necessary. These sessions include:
- Introduction to herd behaviour and overview of nonverbal communication interacting closely with the horse to establish a relationship

- Meditation and breathing session in close proximity of our equine partner to experience unity and awareness of the “now”
- Reflection on our learnings and emotions
- Leading games with horses to ensure position in the mini “herd” of horse and person
- Controlling the movement of horses in the round pen to learn how our body language influences the others

I truly enjoyed my experience at this Retreat and thank you for making it all possible. It has been said one never steps in the same river twice, having made this crossing, I've come away with so much that will resonate for a very long time.

--M.K.

As a yoga instructor the first aspect that we begin to address is the breath when we teach. My experience with the horses at Red Earth Riding School helps me understand this aspect of breath even further and naturally. Most often when we deal with anxiety issues and struggle to find the source, I think being with a horse gently aids you to watch this source. As you stand closer to this beautiful beast, your senses start to move inwards quite effortlessly. This then makes the beginning to know oneself...a trot towards freedom.

One is always on the lookout for 'mindfulness' and each one finds a way to do it. I too have walked this path and tried many ways to root myself. Recently I experienced an amazing way to connect with the 'now', to just 'be' and feel safe from within. Thank you, Jacqueline, for that fabulous moment with the most magnificent animal on earth - Campera, the horse.
